Contract Disclosure Requirements

Disclosure Information:

Down Payment Assistance (DPA) should be separately and clearly disclosed in the 'Other Down Payment' area of the Down Payment section of the Retail Installment contract. If the DPA is not properly disclosed on the contract, dealers are required to submit a Down Payment Assistance (DPA) confirmation form with the contract package in order to be reimbursed for a DPA promotion.

- ✓ Down Payment Assistance amount should be disclosed on the 'Other' line of the Down Payment section of the retail installment sales contract in all states except California. In California the DPA should be combined with any manufacturer rebate and disclosed in the downpayment accordingly or deducted from the cash selling price of the vehicle. If combined with any manufacturer rebate in California, dealers should identify the portion attributed to DPA on the Manufacturer's Rebate disclosure (e.g., "includes $250 DPA").
- ✓ DPA can be listed as: Down Payment Asst, DPA, or Rebates/DPA.
- ✓ If there is a designated Manufacturer (OEM) Rebate line on the contract, any such rebate should be disclosed accordingly. If the form does not have a designated line, the Manufacturer rebates should be disclosed on the 'Other' line in the down payment section and appropriately disclosed.
- ✓ If the contract does not have a 'Rebate' or 'Other' line in the Down Payment section, then the DPA confirmation form is required (See the DPA Confirmation form).
- ✓ Ally requires that dealers include the Down Payment Assistance (DPA) Confirmation form in the contract package when DPA is not or cannot be properly disclosed on the contract.
